3.	The 33d 122mm SP Gun Regiment consisted of three battalions. Each battalion had approximately 150 enlisted and officer personnel assigned, but the units were under strength. Each battalion had one Csepel type signal van truck, four to five T-34 type medium tanks and twenty-seven 122mm SP guns. Each of the SP guns was manned by a five man crew consisting of one officer and four enlisted men. The AAA Platoon of the regiment consisted of seven 37mm AAA guns of which four were kept in mobilization reserve and not used. This unit also had three Soviet type ZIS trucks.
4.	The signal section, which was subordinate to headquarters company, was composed of one telephone and two radio squads. The telephone squad consisted of approximately seven to eight men, nine M41 type field telephones, and two M51, ten circuit field telephone switchboards. The radio squads consisted of approximately eight men each with three R-20 type field radios and one R-7B type radio. The R-7B type radio had an effective range of 200 kilometers but its maximum range was unknown. All of the above squads in the section were understrength.
